V. Overview of RoadMap

The discussion focused on the roadmap for implementing SPD15 over the next four years, aiming to meet the March 2029 deadline. While complying with the deadline is considered aspirational, it does not directly apply to the Task Force. There is no statutory requirement, but state agencies are being motivated to comply.

A link to an SPD15 reference on PubMed Central was provided in the chat: PubMed Central Link.

If the initiative is not federally funded, it will be general-funded. There was a discussion about whether there is an add-on or template that everyone can use to align with the directive.

Cost concerns were raised, particularly with the uncertainty of the priorities of the incoming administration. The availability of resources to make the necessary changes to align with SPD15 was questioned.

There is a broader imperative to improve data across the state. Concrete examples, such as Social Determinants of Health (SDOH) and race/ethnicity, were highlighted. More information can be found in the Public Health Data Improvement | The Pew Charitable Trusts.

It was noted for SPD15 that noncompliance could result in punishments, such as withheld funding. If the Task Force could produce a draft standard, it could then be written into a bill.
